Sculpture: The mother, the woman, the goddess

by Fabiola Ladino

Inspired by decades of profound wisdom and admiration for the remarkably strong women in her life in Colombia, this piece by Fabiola embodies and celebrates the resilience and vibrancy of womanhood. It captures a woman full of colour and life, deeply aware of the challenges of the world around her, yet firmly grounded in her beliefs and passions. Fiercely devoted to her children and family, she proudly adorns herself with jewellery and flowers, a bold expression of her identity for the world to see.

Who makes this possible?

Wagdy Soliman, an Egyptian artist based in London, is a long-time supporter of Children Change Colombia. His connection to Colombia has deepened through his marriage to María Teresa, and his many travels across the country.

With a distinguished background in fine art and graphic design, Wagdy returned to painting in 2000 after a successful career in business. His art reflects a blend of his personal journey and the rich cultural influences he has encountered from Egypt, Colombia, the UK, and France throughout his life.
